

Would you like to contribute to our seminar Sustainability in Organisations?

This international online seminar brings together German and Peruvian students to explore sustainability in organisations through the lens of industrial and organisational psychology. Working in binational small groups, students examine how organisations can foster sustainable practices while considering cultural, regulatory and practical contexts in Germany and Peru.

- Offered for the first time in the summer semester of 2026
- Language: English

We are looking for companies and speakers, ideally with Peruvian-German business relations, who are interested in supporting the students as practical partners. Companies are invited to contribute insights from a completed or ongoing sustainability project (best case) and are free to choose how they wish to participate, as the final seminar design is still under development.

Possible forms of contribution:

- Providing practical input or short case presentations during the seminar
- Acting as interview partners for student groups
- Providing case studies on implemented sustainability measures, challenges encountered and lessons learned

Ideally, students will work on solutions for a current sustainability-related challenge faced by the participating companies. This collaboration thereby provides an excellent opportunity to get to know each other and benefit from the solutions developed by our students.
